

Fund Highlights

The Fund primarily invests in equities of small and medium cap companies located in or having substantial business ties to the United States. The portfolio typically holds approximately 40 high-conviction companies across sectors including technology services, internet, consumer and business services. At the time of investment, the Fund may invest up to 8% of its assets in a security, which may increase to 10% of the Fund’s assets after purchase.

The strategy seeks to identify “Desert Island” companies — exceptional businesses that GIM believes are well positioned for sustaining 15%+ growth over the next 5–7 years. Portfolio Manager Drew Beja works alongside Granahan’s team of multi-sector specialists, applying deep fundamental research to identify companies benefiting from powerful secular growth trends, including digital transformation and AI-driven innovation. A proprietary Expected Return framework evaluates probability-weighted upside and downside scenarios to guide portfolio construction and identify what GIM considers to be the most attractive risk-reward opportunities.

Monthly Commentary

Equity markets continued to advance in June as improving earnings expectations and resilient economic data supported broad participation across the small-cap growth universe. The Granahan US Focused Growth UCITS Fund returned 7.5% (USD) during the month, outperforming the Russell 2000 Growth Index, which gained 3.6% (USD). Relative performance was driven overwhelmingly by stock selection, led by strong contributions from Porch Group, Carpenter Technology, Silicon Motion, Onto Innovation, Axon Enterprise. These gains were partially offset by weakness in Kura Sushi, FTAI Aviation, QXO, Figure Technology, and Sportradar. We continued to trim several strong performers and redeploy capital into opportunities offering more attractive prospective returns. Despite the recent market advance, we remain constructive on the outlook for secular growth, supported by improving corporate earnings, attractive relative valuations, and a healthier capital markets environment, while maintaining a concentrated, high-conviction portfolio focused on businesses with durable competitive advantages and compelling long-term growth potential.
